

Dressing Angels – Charity That Helps The Mentally Ill

To Whom It May Concern,

I would like to share my support for a charity that I was involved with recently, Dressing Angels. Dressing Angels is a charity that helps provide clothing and shoes to those who are affected by mental illness. This charity was founded by Phyllis Lise, whom I've known personally for several years and has helped many of those in need who are affected by mental illness. Her love and passion for this cause is immeasurable and she demonstrates it through all the time and energy she puts into her charity to make it successful. As a result, Dressing Angels has provided lots of clothing and shoes to mentally ill people, both individually and in group homes.

After seeing and hearing Phyllis's passion and mission to help the mentally ill, I was encouraged and decided to volunteer for her charity during my personal time. During the year that I volunteered, my duties mainly included providing website development support and fundraising/marketing event support. I really enjoyed working with Phyllis and the Dressing Angels charity and I couldn't have been more proud to be a part of such a caring and wonderful charity.

I would like to recommend that you strongly consider getting involved with Dressing Angels to support its mission of helping the mentally ill.

Sincerely,
Chris Smith
